

NEWYORKPOST

Last Updated: Tue., Mar. 22, 2011, 10:11am

HOT TOPICS

Joba Chamberlain • Jenn Sterger • Charlie Sheen • Jennifer Aniston

WEEKLY AD

PHOTOS | VIDEOS | BLOGS

News

LiLo dad bust
LOS ANGELES -- Authorities in Los Angeles say Lindsay Lohan's...

NYC Local • Business • Opinion

Page Six

Slow going
Rihanna is having as tough a time selling concert tickets as she...

Gossip • Celeb Photos • PopWrap

Sports

- Bloody mess
- Nets off the Pace
- Colon masterful

Entertainment

Glam dunk
Last month, a blockbuster trade landed Denver Nuggets superstar...

TV • Movies • Events • Travel

Home Columnists ▾ Blogs ▾ High Schools ▾ Yankees Mets Giants Jets Knicks Nets Rangers Devils Isles Bettor's Guide NCAA More ▾

Story

Comment

New look St. Edmund working to build off success

By JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

Last Updated: 11:40 PM, March 19, 2011

Posted: 11:26 PM, March 19, 2011

Comments: 0

You like this. Unlike • Add Comment • Admin
Page • Insights • Error

0

More Print

St. Edmund had the benefit of senior leadership last season, but this year have the promise of youth around a veteran core.

Pitcher Emma Ferington and catcher Casey Scalfani were both gritty and battle-tested. After a slow start the Eagles won seven straight games to claim their first CHSAA Brooklyn division title since 1993. But with CHSAA Brooklyn/Queens Division I merging into a single eight-team league and Ferington and Scalfani both graduated, this year's St. Edmund team has a different journey ahead of it.

"Every game will be a battle and we have to be ready, mentally and physically, to come out of that battle victorious," Eagles coach Rowena Motylewski said. "It's going to take hard work and complete dedication and absolutely nothing can be taken for granted."

PHILIP HALL

St. Edmund's Janelle Garvey will be back at third and provide power in the middle of the order.

With Ferington gone, the fourth-year coach is going to have to rely on two underclassmen in the circle in sophomore Monica Mangano and freshman Angela Fox. Both worked over the summer to prepare for the challenge and Motylewski feels her defense will need to pick them up early on as they build confidence. Fox could also see time at shortstop.

"Both young women are not going to replace the confidence and strength we had in Emma immediately, but we have complete confidence in these girls to throw strikes and let the field do its job," the coach said.

A lot of that confidence comes from the returnees in the field. Cassandra Molinari, one of the city's most complete hitters, is back at shortstop, but could also see time behind the plate. Janelle Garvey, the lineup's biggest thumper, returns at third. The junior ended last season on a power surge that saw her hitting a home run in almost every game, prior to a heartbreaking playoff loss to Mary Louis. Sophomore Veronica Cupo takes over at first base and sophomore Meagan McBride will be at second.

PHILIP HALL

Senior Cassandra Mollanari could see time behind the plate and at short.

"Janelle has been working hard to continually improve her strong bat and will undoubtedly find herself having another great year," Motylewski said. "Her strength and speed on the bases allows her to be that menacing and terrific force."

St. Edmund's strength lies in the outfield. The speedy Shelly Cranston is back in left field and Jenny Russo in right. Both are capable of covering plenty of ground. Motylewski believes sophomore Alex Samosiuk, who will be patrolling center field, could have a breakout season. Demi Speranza could see time behind the plate with Emily O'Regan and provided outfield depth with Briana Munos and Brianna Riviezzo.

"Alex is really just becoming a great ballplayer all around as each day goes by," she said. "She'll be our key defender in center and her bat is really coming along."

The same could be said for her team. The pieces are there for another successful season, but could take some time and experience for things to come together.

"This team knows that success will be something that every single player has to commit to in order to achieve it," Motylewski said. "We can't sit back and let our pitcher do all the work this year."

jstaszewski@nypost.com